A CLOSE CALL.

Mrs. A. F. Arrington of Keytesville
Narrowly Escapes Death in a Runaway.

While Mrs. A. F. Arrington, with her 4-year-old son, Will, was returning Monday morning about 10:30 from A. G. Arrington's, 1 1-2 miles southwest of Keytesville, where she had been to take home her sister-in-law, Miss Eddie Arrington, her horse became frightened at some timbers and tiling that were being used to put in a street-crossing between the Bank of Keytesville and L. E. Cook's store-building.

The frightened animal ran west on Bridge street with Mrs. Arrington doing all in her power to hold onto the lines with sufficient strength to get the runaway mare under control, but the lady was unable to hold her as little Will's yells seemed to add to the fleeing equine's fright and speed. In turning south at the northwest corner of the Keytesville Lumber Co.'s place of business the buggy was upset and Mrs. Arrington and son were thrown out. From the lusty howl that "little Bill" set up it was readily apparent that he was not seriously hurt, and the only injury he sustained was a slight upbriasion of the skin on the inside of the right knee, and of the right leg, near the knee.

Mrs. Arrington, however, was not so fortunate as she fell against an old platform scale sill that had been carelessly left in the street, and had the small bone of her left wrist broken and received a few inconsequential scratches about the head and face, a few bruises on her body, her nose bled some and her under lip was made to bleed pretty freely from coming in violent contact with her teeth. Had her head struck the old scale sill she would have probably been killed. It was, indeed, a close call.

Dr. J. T. Aldridge was sent for and set the lady's broken wrist and administered to other needs, and she was able to be up Wednesday morning.

The mare ran against a telephone pole in front of C. A. Chapman's residence and was knocked to the ground with such force that she laid there until she was assisted to arise, and actually looked sorry for having run away, but it is suspected that her grief was only of the crocodile variety, and that she was more penitent over having been knocked down than she was for running away.

Cupid's Conquests.

FAWKES-DOERRIE:—M. Rush Fawks and Miss Etna Viola Doerrie, both of Salisbury, were married at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Doerrie, Sunday, April 16, 1905. Rev. H. Howard Johnson sealing the plighted vows.

PENROD-WATERFIELD:—P. A. Penrod of Musselfork and Miss Adeline Waterfield of Clifton Hill were married at the office of the officiating justice of the peace, H. A. Wheeler, in Keytesville, Tuesday April 18, 1905. The bridegroom is a blind broom-maker and music teacher and is 42 years old while his bride is eight years his junior.

A Sad Case

Mrs. Mary Terwilager who, with her husband, made her home at Prairie Hill for 11 years, was, upon her own request, taken to the county poor-farm Tuesday by Sheriff S. J. Shaughnessy. After selling out at Prairie Hill Mr. Terwilager had charge of the woodwork department of J. P. Tippet's blacksmith-shop in Keytesville for a few months, but did not bring his wife with him to this place, she remaining at Prairie Hill. They subsequently moved away and Mr. Terwilager has since died. His widow went to Moberly to make her home with her son, Cyrenus Thomas, but she says he is tired of her and turned her out last winter when the thermometer was 10 degrees below zero. She then went to Johnson county, Mo., to live with a daughter, but she, too, did not want her mother in her home and sent her back to this county to her son, Cyrenus, who returned here from Moberly a few weeks ago and is now residing on his farm in the vicinity of Guthridge Mills. Mrs. Terwilager is 75 years old and is quite feeble. She told Sheriff Shaughnessy she knew she would not be welcomed at her son's, and asked that she be conveyed to the poorfarm. It seems almost impossible to believe that a son and daughter would thus cruelly turn their backs upon their old mother and force her to become an object of public charity.

Grand Jury Ordered.

Judge John P. Butler has issued an order for a grand jury at the coming May term of the Chariton circuit court, which meets at Keytesville Monday, May 1. How has your conduct been during the past 12 months?

National stock and poultry food at R. J. Halley's. It is the best thing of the kind on the market.

S. M. White, a well-known and successful Keytesville groceryman, has so far recovered from his recent attack of erysipelas as to be able to look after business.
